Town Told of Redevelopment Plans
Jerry Bodlinger

At the April 9 Council meeting with all members and the Mayor present, it was announced that Robin and Florian Kogelnik have applied for a permit to demolish their house at 6100 Princeton Ave. They plan to build a new house on the same site that is in keeping with the character and integrity of the town. Ms. Kogelnik and her architect presented plans to the Council as a courtesy and to let them know they had applied for County demolition permits and have started the process, required by Glen Echo ordinance, to allow neighbors to review the plans. The Mayor has asked the Town Attorney to review the Town’s rights regarding waivers so that new precedents are not set.

Ms. Kogelnik said they reached the conclusion to demolish and rebuild after consulting with experts on how to move forward with a house that has a serious storm water problem, no existing foundation and no footers.

She told the council that it is quicker and cheaper to demolish the house and rebuild rather than to rehab the existing structure.

Debbie Beers said that more expansions and redevelopment projects within the town are expected. This first teardown “is somewhat novel” for the town, the mayor said. The Kogelnik residence may require a waiver to a town ordinance that requires certain setbacks on corner lots that was passed just a few years ago.

A few town residents asked questions about the project. Some are concerned about larger structures in town, others merely curious about the new plans. The project will have to get County approval first, and then will be presented to the Town for review prior to building permit issuance. At that time, neighborhood comment will be reviewed as well. Plans will not be approved by the County before the demolition permit is approved, which timing cannot be predicted with accuracy.

The mayor took the opportunity to remind anyone who is contemplating a project they need to apply for a town building permit before starting any construction. She also said neighbors need to “sign off” on a project before the town can approves a plan. The town requirement should allow for everybody to have seen the proposal, “so there are no unpleasant surprises” after building starts. She stressed, however, that opposition to a proposal isn’t enough to stop it. There has to be a legal reason for the town to step in.

In another presentation, the architect for another home on Princeton Avenue presented the addition that will be added to the home. The house at 6009 Princeton will be renovated with a 2 ½ story small addition to add space to accommodate the growing family and to correct code issues. The Feringa-Johnson family too, will apply for a town permit after having shown plans to neighbors.

A third renovation project is anticipated at 42 Wellesley Circle with a 2-story addition to the rear of the structure.

Meanwhile, there is ongoing residential reconstruction at the bottom of Bryn Mawr Avenue with no firm completion date at this time.

Budget Hearing and Adoption Announced

The Town Council will hold a hearing at 7:30 p.m. on Monday, May 21, to consider the town budget. The council will meet in special session afterward to adopt the budget. The proposed budget will be distributed to town residents at least two weeks prior to the hearing. The Mayor has invited comment prior to budget preparation or after a budget is distributed. Public comment can be made by mail or email to the Mayor or Nicole Fraser, the Town Administrator, before the hearing (the preferred methods), or in person at the hearing.

Town Funds for Glen Echo Park Gala

The council decided against spending $2,000 for a table at the park gala, as requested by the Glen Echo Park Partnership. Mayor Debbie Beers said it was inappropriate for council members to attend such an event using taxpayer money.

She also noted the town has already contributed $2,000 to the partnership.

Graffiti on MacArthur

Steps are being taken to try to remove the graffiti on the wall surrounding the gas company’s facility at the intersection of MacArthur Boulevard and Goldsboro Road. Council member Nancy Long said she spoke to the Corps of Engineers, which will contact the artist who painted the scenes to see what can be done. Mayor Debbie Beers said the graffiti looks similar to writing on the overpass when you take the path from MacArthur Boulevard near the one lane bridge down to the canal. By mid April, the graffiti was indeed being removed. Anyone who sees graffiti being applied to the wall again should call 911 or the Park Police immediately.

Town Ordinances Review Begins in June

The Council will begin a public review of the Town Ordinances for accuracy and comprehension on June 4th at 8 p.m. This is a major undertaking for the Council and the draft ordinances are a result of more than a year’s efforts undertaken by the Mayor. The ordinances should now have been brought up to date and compiled by the Town Attorney who was assisted by University of Maryland students.

Mayor Beers says she expects there to be three such meetings.

Glen Echo Park Notes

Polly Angelikas, Glen Echo Park site manager stated that an environmental assessment of the geothermal project for Clara Barton House is moving ahead. Clara Barton’s death was observed during the weekend of April 12-15. It included a tree planting, an open house, and a symposium.

April 28th is Family Day at the Park and also marks the start of the carousel season. The carousel operates from 11 a.m. to 6 p.m. and costs $1.25 per ride.

At the April 9 Town Council meeting, Ms. Angelikas stated that a second stop sign has been placed at the intersection of University Avenue and Oxford Road. This one is located on the drivers’ side as a car comes down the hill from MacArthur Boulevard.

In addition, Angelikas said several other safety steps have been taken. They include lowering the speed limit in the park’s upper parking lot to 10 miles per hour, adding speed bumps and signs reminding drivers to watch for children.

The ballroom café is now open with a new vendor. It is being run by a company named Brown Bag—they have a contract through the carousel season.

The NPS and Montgomery County met recently to review progress on the Environmental Assessment for the shared use path and to incorporate the Federal Highways Safety Team’s recommendations into the EA and shared use path plans. Montgomery County will next seek a permit to do the archeological testing that is required as part of the EA.

Trolley Removed From Park

National Park Service reported that the trolley car at Glen Echo Park along with the railroad ties was removed on April 24, by General Machine workers using two fork-lifts and a flat bed truck. The hill in front of the Yellow Barn was used by the movers to remove the trolley after considerable site preparation work.

The National Park Service made the decision to move the trolley due to restoration costs and the fact that it is not authentic to Glen Echo transportation but was donated by the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority (SEPTA) of Philadelphia in 2005. NPS was told that costs to restore the trolley in a properly ventilated maintenance off-site facility were over $100,000.00, excluding freight charges.

In addition to restoration costs, the trolley should evidently be stored indoors for preservation purposes. Park staff determined that a shelter around the trolley is not an option since it would visually impair the historic park entrance.

The trolley was donated to the National Park Service in 2005. The original plan was to restore and renovate the trolley for use as an interpretive exhibit about Glen Echo Amusement Park, especially the Park’s years of segregation. Attempts were made to raise funds or find other ways to restore the trolley and remove the lead paint from its interior. During a large volunteer event in November 2010, volunteers sanded and primed the rusting exterior under the direction of an architectural conservator and using guidance from a restoration plan provided by a consultant. Six months later, when rust corroded the recently primed areas, additional subject matter experts were consulted regarding the best way to restore the streetcar. They concluded that it was too hazardous for park staff to restore the trolley onsite due to the harsh products, chemicals, and processes involved for interior and exterior repairs.

The trolley tracks remain on the site which is where Civil Rights Protesters picketed Glen Echo Amusement Park during the 1960 “Summer of Change.” The picketers’ actions opened the then-segregated amusement park to all races. Plans are being made to add interpretive waysides about the “Summer of Change” near the original trolley tracks. The owner of General Machine is planning to keep the vehicle in the company’s yard at the present time.

C&O Canal National Historical Park
Reports Diseased Bats

The C&O Canal National Historical Park recently reported that White-nose syndrome (WNS) was observed in Washington County, Maryland in an abandoned cement mine owned by the Chesapeake and Ohio Canal National Historical Park during March 2012 bat surveys. Bats from the mine were not submitted for laboratory confirmation; however the disease was confirmed in Maryland-owned mines belonging to the same complex in spring 2011.

White fungal growth indicative of WNS was observed on most little brown bats and tricolor bats hibernating in the cement mine. Surveys conducted in the complex also documented a severe decline in the overall bat population from the previous five-year average and the lowest number recorded since regular monitoring was initiated in 1998. White-nose syndrome is a disease caused by the fungus Geomyces destructans and is responsible for the deaths of millions of bats in eastern North America. It is named for a white fungus that forms on the faces of infected bats. While the actual cause of death due to WNS is unknown, the disease results in bats becoming restless during hibernation. Their movement results in burning up necessary fat reserves or losing body fluid. There is no known cure for the disease.

The C&O Canal is home to ten bat species and the largest hibernating population of bats in the state of Maryland. Of the ten known species that reside in the park, at least six that hibernate in park caves, tunnels, and mines are susceptible to WNS. Park mines and tunnels used by hibernating bats are closed to the public to minimize the chance of spreading the disease to other areas.

Kevin Brandt, Park Superintendent stated “we will continue to monitor bat populations in our caves, tunnels and mines, and we hope to minimize WNS affecting other bat habitats outside of our boundaries.” Park visitors are reminded not to handle bats, particularly those found dead or acting abnormally. According to the NPS Office of Public Health, WNS does not appear to pose a threat to human health since the fungus that causes WNS
only grows at temperatures well below human body temperature. However, WNS can cause sick bats to exhibit unusual behavior, such as flying outdoors or at hibernaculum entrances at all times of day and in all types of weather, so bats may be encountered in unusual settings.

While humans are not at risk of contracting WNS,
bats are known to carry other diseases such as rabies.
If you see a dead, sick or injured bat within the park,
please notify the park at 301-714-2225. Any dead, injured or sick bats found outside of the park should be reported to the local state wildlife agency. For more information about C&O Canal National Historical Park, please visit: www.nps.gov/choh.

Better Hearing and Speech Month
Since 1927, the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association (ASHA) has celebrated Better Hearing and Speech Month each May. This month of awareness is a good time to analyze your own hearing and determine if you are one of the estimated 28 million Americans who have a hearing loss that can be treated. You may have a hearing loss if you:
• frequently ask people to repeat themselves
• often turn your ear toward a sound to hear it better • understand people better when you wear your glasses or look directly at their faces
• lose your place in group conversations
• keep the volume on your radio or TV at a level that others say is too loud
• have pain or ringing in your ears

“People who see themselves in these statements should see an audiologist for a hearing test,” said audiologist and neighbor Pam Mason.
Even a very slight hearing loss can have an important impact on your daily life. Hearing loss is treatable, and there is no reason for anyone to miss all the important sounds of life.”

Pam advised that annual hearing checkups is a good idea for people age 45 and up, according to audiologists, the professionals who specialize in preventing, identifying, assessing, and treating hearing disorders.

Audiologists can prescribe hearing aids and assistive listening devices, and they can teach people with hearing loss how to concentrate on hearing all sounds.

Audiologists are certified by the American Speech-Language-Hearing Association and licensed in Maryland.
