Municipal Audit
Eva Webb, a CPA from Linton Shafer Warfield & Garrett (LSWG), reported the results of the Town’s municipal audit. A 40-page report was generated, and Eva presented a summary of that report. Overall, LSWG provided a clean audit report and the results were delivered to the state on time as required. The report resulted in a couple recommendations to strengthen internal controls and improve the way the Town manages its finances. Specifically, to avoid the ability to manipulate the books, they recommend the Town Clerk, who records payments and receipts, not also be authorized to sign Town checks. They also recommend that someone from the Council review the Town’s financial records and monthly reports on a monthly basis. The Council agreed with these recommendations and plan to implement them.

Maryland Public Information Act Requests
Town lawyer, Ron Bolt, introduced Resolution 19-07, regarding the adoption of the Maryland Attorney General’s model regulations for public information requests. Comparable to freedom of information requests, this regulation defines how the Town will respond to requests and sets forth costs that will be charged for providing copies of the requested materials. Many documents are already available through the Town website, including the minutes from each Council meeting. The Council agreed that ancillary materials used during Council meetings will also be scanned and included with the meeting minutes on the website. After a brief discussion regarding copy costs, a motion to adopt the draft amendment was passed.

New Construction Building Permit Fee Increase
The Council discussed the Mayor’s recommendation to increase the new construction permit fee from $2,500 to $4,000. The primary reason to increase the fee is to help offset the costs of oversight from engineer Joe Toomey and code enforcement officer Wayne Fowler. Originally budgeted at $10,000, the costs of these efforts have nearly doubled. The development at Vassar Circle, led by resident Aaron Hirsch, will be most directly affected because the increase would affect two of the remaining new construction permits required to complete the four homes.

The Council discussed the pros (improved oversight compared to County inspectors) and cons (difficult to manage or predict costs) of the support from Toomey and Fowler. Council Member Spielman wanted to ensure that the Town was being cost efficient and not paying for oversight already provided by the County. The Mayor was adamant, as he has been in past meetings, that County oversight is simply not sufficient and that the additional costs were necessary to ensure Town interests were being protected. To fund this oversight, the Town initially increased new home permit fees from $500 to $2,500 this past January.

Mr. Hirsch provided a statement in opposition to the new fees. He noted that the Town, under the prior administration, agreed that road construction, funded by Mr. Hirsch, would be overseen by County inspectors. Mr. Hirsch paid $15,000 for the County to provide an inspector. Currently, Adam Curtain, from the County’s Right of Way division, inspect the project twice a day to monitor compliance. Mr. Hirsh also pays for a Geotechnical engineer to ensure the structural integrity of the road during construction. Since then, the Town decided to hire additional inspectors and increase new construction permit fees. Mr. Hirsch argued that the approximately $2,000/year in tax revenue that each of the four homes will eventually generate should be considered and requested the Council vote against the fee increase.

The motion to increase the fees passed 3-1 with Mr. Spielman dissenting.

Auxiliary Dwelling Units

The Council briefly discussed the introduction of Ordinance 19-06, a reaction to new, looser County laws that regulate setbacks and other regulations associated with building Auxiliary Dwelling Units (ADUs). A public hearing regarding the ordinance will be held at the December 9 Council meeting with a vote to enact the ordinance expected at a special session or at the January Council meeting.

Committee Reports

The Environmental Committee’s Holly Shimizu presented plans for the Glen Echo Bee and Butterfly Garden in honor of Nancy Long. The Town has agreed to contribute $5,000 to the effort, and the garden will be built along 60 feet of the fence next to the Town Hall.
The bed has been prepared for the Nancy Long Bee & Butterfly Garden.

along the MacArthur Boulevard right of way. The garden has a naturalistic design and will consist of many native pollinator plants including Zinnia, Little False Blue-stem, and Black Chokeberry. The Committee is asking for additional donations from residents to fund benches and plaques to identify the plants. Look for a wishlist on page 8. A family planting day for the garden is planned for this upcoming spring.

The Livable Town Committee is planning for a Winter Lights event in late January. The event would be held in front of the Town Hall where a couple fire pits will be stationed and mulled cider and s'mores can be enjoyed. Luminaries along University and Harvard are also envisioned to brighten the night. January 25 is being considered, but the date has not been finalized at this time.

Other Business
Jean Sperling, consultant to the Mayor, recently reviewed the Debris Management Plan with the County, which the Town last signed in 2016. The plan defines responsibilities between the Town and County in the event of a large-scale emergency event. The agreement ensures that the Town can take advantage of all services available in case a hazardous event is declared by the federal government. Ms. Sperling recommended signing the new agreement and the Council approved a motion to do so.

Town Clerk Beth Boa presented the Town Operations Report. Seven Town residents took advantage of the recent flu shot clinic. The Holiday Party is planned for December 7. Beth spoke to Pepco about the idea of installing a pay-by-use electric car charger in the Town Hall parking lot. The Council discussed the idea, but no specific action was taken. The Town is continuing to look for a possible glass recycling solution, but no specific path has been selected.

Town Expenses
In November, the Town paid $3,000 to LSWG (audit), $2,910 to Goode Companies (trash), $1,163 to Blue Crab Contracting (Wayne Fowler), and $1,100 to Evans Tree Service. — Bill Vincent

Coming Up
The Council meeting on December 9 will begin at 7 PM and will have two guests: The first will be Captain Sean Gagen, the new Commander of the 2nd Police District (Bethesda). In his new position, he plans to focus on traffic issues, thefts from vehicles, and pharmacy robberies. Residents are encouraged to attend and bring questions and concerns. The second guest will be Sarah Hedlund, archivist and librarian at Montgomery History. She will give an update on the archiving she has done for the Town, including discussing the items of interest she has found.

A NOTE FROM THE MAYOR

The Town owns two significant parcels of raw land bounded by Oberlin and Tulane (near the Irish Inn) that the Town is considering selling as commercial property, rather than holding onto the property as a “rainy day fund.”

I use “rainy day fund” as that was the term attached to this land for years, with residents thinking that the value will increase and always be available despite any downturns in the market. Clearly, it makes more sense to sell now in this strong real estate market and make interest off the cash. The Town can then meet its many infrastructure needs in the near future, rather than hope that the property value will be high when the Town most needs the funds derived from the land sale. Any buyer will offer less if the Town is forced into selling to address emergency infrastructure needs such as its roads — aka a distress sale.

The two parcels have a current tax assessment of over $1M. Before an appraiser can determine the proper value of the parcels, a land survey is required, and the Town is now in the process of engaging a survey firm. Once the survey is completed, the Town has chosen J. Lee Donnelly of Bethesda to handle the appraisal work. I look for the survey and appraisal to be completed by the first quarter of 2020. The funds from the sale can then be invested for the Town’s future needs. — Willem Polak

The plants we choose to decorate our homes during the holidays aren’t simply beautiful plants. In fact, the traditional Christmas plants have a rich history. Their uses relate to beliefs and seasons, and were thought to provide protection, fragrance, and even good luck. Here are some of my favorites:

Poinsettia, called the Christmas Flower
The poinsettia plant came to us from Mexico. Poinsettias were brought to the United States in 1828 by Joel Poinsett, who was the first U.S. Ambassador to Mexico. The red of poinsettia is not the flower but actually the bract. The flowers are the small, yellow centers of each bract. The Mexican legend of the poinsettia is that a young girl named Pepita wanted to give a present to baby Jesus at the Christmas Eve church service. Since she had no money, she picked a handful of weeds and placed them on the altar. She was embarrassed that her gift was so modest. Then, as she knelt down, her weeds suddenly turned the brilliant red of poinsettias. Ever after, the poinsettia became known as the “Flores de Noche Buena,” or “Flowers of the Holy Night.”

Rosemary for Remembrance
In the Middle Ages, rosemary was a favorite strewing herb during the holidays. Leaves were spread on the floor so that the aroma of rosemary would permeate the air as people walked on them. Why rosemary? Because it was believed to ward off any evil spirits and allow goodness to enter the home. Today, some people keep rosemary plants indoors during the holidays with the hope of banishing negativity and encouraging only good times during the festive season. Did you know that to this day rosemary is considered an important plant to enhance the memory? So, keep a rosemary plant nearby to sharpen your memory and consider making a fragrant rosemary lemon tea.

Decking the Halls with Boughs of Holly
Some ancient civilizations believed that holly plants had magical properties. Long before the birth of Christ, the Celts used holly to decorate during the winter solstice festivities and, due to its evergreen qualities, it came to symbolize eternal life. Many druids wore holly as ceremonial head wear when they went into the forest. Hanging holly in the home was believed to bring good luck and protection. The Romans believed holly to be the sacred plant of Saturn, and during the festival of Saturnalia, gave it as an offering to the God Saturn. Holly also plays a part in the Christmas carol tradition in “The Holly and the Ivy.”

Boxwood Wreaths
Boxwood was also used in early Europe to celebrate the Winter Solstice, the longest and darkest night of the year. Wreaths were woven from boxwood with four candles placed in them to represent the four basic elements: earth, air, fire, and water. When this custom was eventually adopted by the Christian Church, it became known as the Advent Wreath and symbolized the time of waiting and preparation for the birthday of Jesus Christ. Boxwood is my favorite cut green to work with for the holidays. It is good for your boxwood plants to pluck (break out) some branches where the growth is thick. This will open the plant up for light and air to get into its center. Inside the house, boxwood greens are easy to work with, look elegant, and hold their bright green leaves for a long time. Knowledge of the lore of plants makes their use during the holidays even more fun! —HOLLY SHIMIZU
The Ahrens family, who moved in to 6106 Bryn Mawr this fall, have big plans to make their new home their own. Inside, there are boxes and boxes of books to unpack, though the kitchen shelf is already filled with cookbooks from around the world. Rita, a dedicated artist, will be setting up space for painting and drawing. They are also making room for a bevy of musical instruments, Russell’s large collection of board games, and a couple of cats.

Outside, Rita is sketching out plans for the garden: They plan to revamp the outdoor space, create a garden path in the narrow area behind the house and incorporate edible landscaping for both practical (herbs!) and aesthetic purposes. There will be space for outdoor entertaining.

Russell and Rita connected over poetry and origami while undergraduates at Yale. They moved to D.C. while Russell studied at Georgetown, then remained in the District, living in Woodley Park for more than a decade.

More recently, they were attracted by the idea of living near Glen Echo Park, particularly its opportunities for artists. They rented in the Wood Acres neighborhood while looking for the right place in Glen Echo. Yalies through and through, they nearly put in an offer on a house on Yale Avenue.

Rita is the executive director for OCA - Asian Pacific American Advocates, a national civil rights organization focused on the perspectives of Asian Americans and Pacific Islanders. Her work involves travel around the country and advocacy for policies on immigration, education, and fair treatment.

On a lighter side, she recently took part in the launch of the first all-Asian superhero team from Marvel Comics. Previously, Rita worked as a public school teacher.

Russell is the principal and founder of a management consulting practice. Earlier in his career he worked in book publishing and for a helicopter company. While he works mainly with federal clients, his business is expanding to new practice areas focused on education equity and helping non-traditional students gain access to and achieve success in higher education.

Their daughter, Naomi Bopha (Hebrew-Cambodian names that translate to “pretty flower”) is an eighth grader at Pyle. She is fluent in French (thanks to her elementary school years at Washington International School) and is learning Italian. When I visited, she was off to one of many musical activities: She participates in Cambodian music and dance, plays piano, guitar, and bass clarinet, and is studying opera. Her little brother, Byron, a first grader at Bannockburn, enjoys building and creating. He’ll have plenty of inspiration around him in the family’s new home.

Tucked away from the bustle of the Carroll Avenue commercial district in Takoma Park, a quiet but impressive West African restaurant called Masa Kunda opened up early this year. This restaurant, located at 8000 Flower Avenue, made little noise when it first opened up, despite the big flavors being served up on its plates. The decor pays homage to the musical traditions of its ancestral origins through beautifully custom-made chairs outfitted from traditional percussion instruments called sabar drums.

As someone who has made Masa Kunda a regular spot for long-overdue girlfriend lunches, family dinners, and visits with out-of-town guests, my meals at the restaurant have been consistently delectable but with enough small tweaks to the menu to keep me impressed. One of my favorites that even my kids love is the peanut butter “chu” (stew) served generously with the meat, fish, or vegetarian option of your choosing. Alongside each hearty main dish comes the option to balance with an equally generous portion of rice or couscous seasoned in a perfectly simple jollof style. If heat is what you crave, ask for their special spicy sauce, but only add it a drop at a time!

But it’s easy to find yourself too satiated by the many starter options—turnovers, fried plantains, and fritters, to name just a few—making it difficult to get to dessert, what I consider the restaurant’s crowning glory. Most don’t think of sweets when they think of West African cuisine, but Masa Kunda is breaking from tradition with an entire pastry counter of multi-layered cakes all homemade and almost always sold out.

The restaurant doesn’t yet allow for reservations online, and is too far for delivery, but you can call to reserve a table most any day of the week. —MONA KISHORE

Over the past several months, we have filled vacancies in education, visual arts programs, and facilities staff.

The NPS Superintendent for the George Washington Parkway Charles Cuvelier and Ranger Aaron LaRocca visited Town Hall on the evening of November 18 to present the results of a study on traffic management around Glen Echo Park. Present at the meeting were the Mayor, Town Clerk, several Town residents, GEP-PAC board members, and residents of Cabin John.

The study was commissioned in 2017 and included review of pedestrian, auto, and bicycle safety along the Parkway and along MacArthur Boulevard corridor. The study report has resulted in plans that will improve signage, road markings, and reconfiguration of ramps around the Glen Echo “turn-around.” The study involved interviews of stakeholders and observations and traffic incidents. The report does address the problem of motorists cutting through the Glen Echo Park parking lot to avoid lines at the three-way stop. Mr. LaRocca noted that the installation of a traffic light at the intersection (Montgomery County will do this in 2020) should alleviate this problem. There was no discussion of the concerns about traffic on Oxford Road. NPS is hoping to receive federal funding (up to $10 million) to make needed improvements. Stay tuned. A copy of the report is available for review in Town Hall. — Martha Shannon

In October, the Livable Town Committee hosted a sneak peek and discussion with the film maker of a new documentary about the civil rights protests at Glen Echo Park in 1960. In the film Ain’t No Back to a Merry-Go-Round, director Ilana Trachtman follows the events of the protests that ultimately led to the integration of the amusement park through the interviews of eight surviving protesters. It’s the remarkable story of the first interracial civil rights protest where an unusual mix of radical black students from Howard and leftist white suburbanites from Bannockburn picketed together for ten weeks. Of interest to Glen Echoans, our Town was opposed to integration of the Park. The film isn’t complete yet, and Trachtman is still seeking financial support. You can view some of the footage online by searching for the film’s title on vimeo.
